Art novelties at Snow & Young's.

Judge W. N. Dusenberry has received a very interesting letter from his son Harvey, one of the volunteers now at Manila. The sentiment in the letter is that while all the boys are anxious to get back they are willing to stay as long as they are needed. The opinion among the troops seems to be that an engagement is possible very soon between the Americans and the Filipinos.

"Under the Dome" was presented at the Provo opera house to a small audience Monday evening. The play was well presented and well received and deserved better patronage. The scenic effects were novel and beautiful. The whistling by Mr. Harry B. Sutherland and the singing and dancing by Miss Adeline Hunt were received with especial favor and were heartily enjoyed.

Local scenes by a local artist at Snow & Young's.

The marriage of Miss Lucy J. Brimhall and Mr. J. William Knight takes place in the Salt Lake temple today. Tomorrow evening a grand reception will be given in the opera house. The bride is the daughter of Prof. Geo. H. Brimhall and is one of our most popular young ladies. The groom is a son of Jesse Knight, and is interested extensively in mining operations. We extend congratulations.

Monday evening Mrs. Ann E. Perry died. She was 77 years old, was born in Coventry, England, and came to Utah in 1865, living in Salt Lake for 18 years, coming to Provo in the late '80's, where she has lived ever since. Her life has been uneventful and her death was quiet and peaceful. She leaves four grandchildren to mourn her loss. Funeral services were held today at the First ward meeting house.

Kamas Pig Story.

Wasatch Wave: A good story has just come to light, which is too good to keep. Last fall the threshers were at a certain place near Kamas. The next morning after they had gone the good woman went out to feed the pig. When she came near the pig pen she saw a large pile of hay the threshmen had left upon the ground directly in her way, so to more handily feed the pig, she made one long stride over the hay and began pouring out the swill. Suddenly the pile beneath her became animated and she found herself being carried swiftly along the ground. The motive power soon developed into a large, rail splitter of a hog, and she found herself fairly seated astride the porker and going around the lot at a 2:40 clip. Piggy had his back up and the long bristles stood straight up in air, and the lady, thinking, no doubt, that she had her gude mon in hand, grasped it with both hands and held on for dear life while round and round the lot they went. His piggy-biding that the lady was a boss rider from away back, and that plain running, bucking, pitching and standing on his hind feet would not dislodge her, made for the spring branch which runs through the lot, seemingly with wicked intent, but the gallant rider was not asleep, not much, she just threw her feet forward, up behind piggy's ears and awaited the development.

We, who saw this great feat, (not the great feat) of hogmanship (not horse-manship) thought piggy meant to dive to rid himself of such a porous plaster of a rider, and was just about to make the plunge when timidly looking back he saw, oh heavens, the lady's feet behind his ears, and oh! such fear! With one agonized squeal he cleared the branch with one jump, made straight for a barb wire fence, through which he went like a bullet, leaving his rider sticking to the cruel barbs like clothes to a patent clothes line. We picked her off carefully, holding before our faces the fragment of her rescued wardrobe, and delivered her, partly, into her fond husband's arms and shielding embraces. She yet lives, and when the neighbor's hogs trespass on her lot now she sends her little boy to them with this message; Say, ma says if you don't keep your hog home that she will ride it. It has the desired effect.

P. S.—The woman riding-hog, was pointed north when last seen. The owner has looked for him in vain. One or two people in Kamas think they saw something going north with great speed but they can't agree as to what it looked like, one said it resembled a telegraph message but others think it looked like a string of fried sausages. This is a true story and if any one doubts it we will prove it.
